

2017 Potpourri...or, 8 Questions for 2018

28 December 2017

This list of reader questions is so personally satisfying, I can't begin to say how; that any reader even asks, warms my heart better than a fireplace and hot chocolate (something recent weather has required.)

These questions suggest TheAmendment.net might have played a small, inspiring role. Thank you, Stephen. Reader questions in blue italics; Committee answers are not.

RQ1. Time Travelling

Science fiction has "time machine" that allows people to travel back and forth in time. And if that is physically possible, we might have "time travelers" from the future, or from the past, in our midst now.

C: Yes, however science fiction is not; if it can be imagined it exists. All creation exists because of imagination. The issue is access, not existence as we will address in the following questions.

a. Is this really physically possible? And if so, do we have "time travelers" with us on Earth now?

C: Yes, however human definitions, preferences and expectations of physical exclude time travel. This is by design, intent and objective. You are a time traveler all of you. We understand the question, you want to know if there is a time traveler with a physical body. Yes, that is you also. We know what you mean, a time traveler with a physical a body where the body is from another time. Yes, that exists also and you would call it an alien extraterrestrial. Your visitors come from different times. The difference is, their timeline does not match yours, so it is different. Think of a meter stick and a yardstick. Place them upon the ground and see how the inches and centimeters do not match up. We know what you are asking, you want to know if a body from a future or past human time can come to this human time with the body from that former or future moment? No, that is not human.

b. Since we all know time travelling, especially travelling to the past, would screw up the timeline. Rather than "physically time travelling", is there a technology to allow us a glimpse of (or to watch) the past, rather than physically going back (and screw up the timeline) or forward? I am talking about doing things physically on Earth, so please don't say that we do it all the time in our sleep when we discuss our plans with our GAG.

C: There could be changes to events, however if these are screwed up or favorable depends upon the point-of-view of the observer and participant. Altering past events to prevent the birth of Adolph Hitler would hardly be considered a screw-up by most humans aware of Hitler, and we can say with determined certainty, that would be a screw-up. The distortion is simply one view of the change, and there are good and bad parts to each modification, as you choose to see each aspect.

Yes, there already exists in all of you a technology to see your human past lives, it is called your mind. You can visit past lives as long as you understand before the visit, that there is no time and what are called past lives are simply alternate incarnations inserted at different point along an artificial timeline. Humans see time as a line, extending forward and back.

Time is an illusion and where it is artificially imposed, it is a circle. It is continuous and unbroken. To visit a past life simply requires the circle to be rotated. Leave Earth's surface behind temporarily and set aside the rising sun, forget that it sets and also the darkness which follows and precedes the day. In this condition, you can rotate the circle, circles and spheres to any life experience you have imagined or lived or both.

The key ingredient is belief.

You wish to transpose physical human existence with another time? You may; you can swim in water as you fly through the air or run as your feet remain still. You will say you cannot do these things; we say you can but for the physical limitations of a body you have chosen. Your question says, you wish to eat, swallow and remain hungry. You wish to drink and remain thirsty, you wish to consume alcohol and remain sober. You wish to shout into silence and to hear it.

RQ2. ET on Earth

There are ET's from a few different planets "monitoring" us now. (And they seem to enjoy the show.) Mostly, they are observing the "Prime Directive" and not taking part in activities on Earth.

C: Observing, not monitoring. No plans are in place with any such observers which include action based upon a certain thing they might see. Yes the show is very enjoyable, the reason the alien extraterrestrials tune in. Correct, they do not participate.

a. If ET is supposed to be "looking but not touching", what is this business of alien abduction about?

C: Life plan agreements by certain humans. These are not abductions carried out against the will of the human, however they certainly seem that way. Many things seem to be what they are not, or promise what never comes.

b. There are also claims that some ETs (e.g. reptilians) are with us now, but they have the ability to shape-shift and assume a humanoid appearance. Is that true? If so, how many? I thought that would break the 'Prime Directive', so why are they allowed to do that?

C: Yes, alien extraterrestrials have been on Earth since well before humans. You were created by them. They are humanoid already, there is no need to assume a humanoid appearance. You mean to say, they disguise their true appearance to resemble a human indistinguishable from what humans expect to see in terms of dress, hair style, manner and habit.

This is extremely rare, because it serves no purpose. Observance and understanding of many things humans do, does not require a disguise. To interact with you without your knowledge, achieves nothing. This idea is born of the human proclivity for mischief, much of it carried out in ignorance of the effects.

RQ3. Use of Nuclear Weapons

What are the reasons that any use to nuclear weapon is prohibited? Because:

a. That would screw up too many souls' life plans? Or

C: No, because it would cause a great disturbance and pain across the galaxy and universe. Preventing such an event would avoid the screw-up you mention, however this is a fringe benefit and a very valuable one, however it is not the prime motivator. Human have learned to burn down their rented home. The landlord has other plans.

b. If Earth is destroyed by nuclear weapon, that would likely cause a major imbalance in the solar system, much like the fourth planet being blown up by a giant asteroid years ago. A major imbalance of our solar system (spinning out of balance) will also affect other star systems in our quadrant. And therefore, although humanity may destroy itself, we are not allowed to destroy the planet, lest it affects other star systems far and wide?

C: The disturbance would extend far beyond the solar system of which Earth is a part. Interestingly, from the limitations of the three dimension existence humans occupy, there would be no disturbance to other planets, orbits or rotations. Humans do not have the capability to destroy the planet physically, only to render surface conditions temporarily inhospitable for life.

Consider what is often mentioned as the effect of a high altitude nuclear detonation and subsequent electromagnetic burst. This would affect and destroy most electric and electronic circuits, yet leave the appearance of all such devices intact. Nuclear annihilation of a vast swath of life on Earth would not extend physical effects out to other planets, stars or systems. It would screw with the souls and energies of the galaxy and universe to such degree that it will not be allowed.

This control is not held or carried out by alien extraterrestrial visitors, although they are well aware of its existence. This power is in the hands of your Guardian Angels and Guides, individually and collectively. This power has been given to each soul's guardians and guides by that soul before incarnation.

RQ4. 4th and 5th Dimensions

I saw reference of Earth evolving to 4th dimension, and also reference to other life forms as living in 4th or 5th dimension. I also remember that Big Foot can come and go between our 3-dimension world and another dimension.

C: Yes, this will come to be; correct.

For those ordinary folks like myself, I know we live in a 3-dimension world. Presumably, the 4th dimension is time! I can't even fathom what the 5th dimension is. But I remember that super-string theory implies that the whole universe requires 11 dimensions to explain the universe.

C: There exists no such thing as an ordinary human. Yes, three parameters define your physical limitations. The fourth dimension is time as its essential element, however time operates either differently or not at all, within it. Time can be compressed, elongated, realigned and rearranged or simply set aside to not matter. The fifth dimension is the absence of time and physical density unless chosen to be experienced or influenced, briefly according to the time in effect, in the fourth dimension for a segment or interval only time can define, or the third and below, where it reigns supreme for all beings awake.

Super string theory is not a theory and not a string, yet remains being called this, because it exists as the result of, with and inside physical properties humans are not prepared to accept.

Could the esteemed GAG shed some light on what 4th and 5th dimensions are? Or is it just a "name" for other planes of existence, e.g. heaven (our home!) or other higher planes. And if so, how does a planet (e.g. Earth) shift from the 3rd dimension to the fourth?

C: As we have said, the fourth dimension is where time is optional and mutable; the fifth dimension is where it is not in effect, unless chosen to be observed. Remember, speed or velocity are time and distance. Remove time, and distance shrinks to nothing because speed is not able to be calculated. We suggest fire, the visible effect of combustion. It requires fuel, heat and oxygen. Remove any of the three and fire disappears. Remove time from speed and distance collapses to zero.

The fifth dimension is therefore, a concept of location. You are located everywhere in the fifth dimension. The fourth dimension maintains a location separation but removes the physicality of the third, second and first dimensions believed by its occupants to be the outer limit of existence. This outer limit is simply a frontier, traversed each time you sleep.

This is why humans struggle with the idea of visiting the hereafter and higher dimensions; firstly all humans do it always, so nothing is gained by improperly inserting into your consciousness something you insert yourself on a regular, nearly universal daily basis.

RQ5. Mermaid, Does It Exist?

Now that the mystery of Loch Ness (yes, it exists) and Big Foot (yes it exists, but it tends to drift between this world and another dimension). Could the GAG also help dispel this once and for all? (Yes, I think it exists.)

C: The Big Foot Yeti, to use your human name, does not drift. These beings actively transcend and travel between the dimensionalities, at will. They cannot do it instantly and practice from a young age to speed up the process. Newly born they can do it nearly automatically and very quickly but as they grow, much as occurs with humans and telepathic communication, the ability is forgotten a little and is retrained into the Big Foot Yeti before they reach an equivalent stage of adolescence.

Yes, mermaids exist. Most of them are called dolphins, yet a few remain in the condition of a fish body and tail connected to a human torso with arms. They are amphibious. They are intelligent and unlike dolphins, avoid humans as much as possible. The reasons are obvious, humans would attempt capture and if successful, would kill them, either passively or actively.

RQ6. Spiritual Development Index

The esteemed GAG once remarked that on a scale of 1 to 100, the average spiritual development score of the average reader of the Amendment was about 70-something.

C: No scale such as this exists, and none can. The existence of such scale implies linear qualifications, abilities and progress. These are artificial and essentially false. They do not reflect true intelligence and represent a distortion. The straight line measurement of a vehicle's speed capability is a poor and erroneous indicator of its likelihood to win a race. The turns, driver and braking, to name only three variable items, are essential to proper estimation.

Questions:

a. Is this spiritual developmental index a log scale or some other progressive scale? Because if Jesus scores 100, and my score is about 70, I could not fathom that my spiritual development is 70% of Jesus'. If I had to "score myself", I would think I would not score more than 1% or 2% of Jesus' score.

C: If it were accurate, it would be logarithmic. Neither you nor Jesus would score anything along such a scale. It limits measurement of your true ability to such a degree, that a score is not only useless, but misleading.

b. That was an very interesting calculation. Perhaps the esteemed GAG could elaborate a little more? For example, I would guess someone like Jesus Christ or the Buddha would probably be scored at 100. But it would be useful (as a reference), what would a score of 50 or 80 correspond to? For example, what would Mother Theresa's or Abraham Lincoln's scores be (during their lifetime)? So that we could understand the 70-something score better.

C: Your interesting questions are so loaded with assumptions that a linear intelligence scale even exists, that their inquiring, inquisitive springs have compressed and failed. An objective measurement of intelligence must be first circular, then spherical. Impartial scores along a nearly infinite number of vectors radiating out from the center of such sphere mean nothing as the vector itself can be lengthened at an instant, rendering the scale useless and devoid of meaning. Moreover, even if a sphere can, as humans like to say, be limited to a consistent diameter for purpose and effect of analysis, or for argument's sake, the sphere can be rotated. This changes entirely the point-of-view, thus "score."

c. My understanding is that souls who choose to incarnate on Earth would usually repeat this exercise until enough experience has been gathered, before moving on to some other path of development. What score on this development index do souls usually achieve before "graduating" from the Earth experience and moving onto something else?

C: Yes, but there are an unlimited number of reasons additional incarnations are pursued and often, the decision to incarnate again is only made after one is complete. To choose in advance a series of twelve or two hundred incarnations, with the decision already final that no more will be pursued after the pre-decided limit has been reached, is quite rare. The understanding and definition of enough is only reached, if ever reached, along the path a soul pursues to arrive there.

There is no score, no ranking. You graduate from Earth never and immediately.

RQ7. Personal Aura

I read that everyone has his own personal aura. I was told that mine was blue and yellow (or gold) at one time. Could the esteemed GAG enlighten us more about personal aura?

C: Every living thing on Earth emits an aura, as do all souls, beings and anything in the universe.

Questions:

a. Is colour of the personal aura reflective of a person's spiritual development, or is it just a reflection of a person's mood, character, or health?

C: Both, and this depends on the moment. One or the other or something else.

b. A person's aura may come in different colours, such as blue, yellow (gold), red, green, orange, white, etc. What do the different colours represent?

C: Yes, auras are almost always multicolored. Unicolor is rare and temporary. Blue often means sad, down, disappointed, dejected but also calm, clear, transparent and open. Yellow and gold represent energy, happiness, joy, energy, movement and action but also heat, oppression, pressure and weight. Red means anger, emotion and rage but also intensity, power, strength and force. Green and orange are combinations of these energies, just as they exist as mixtures of other colors on Earth in the third dimension.

There are aura colors reflective or indicative of basic personality traits however no human, animal or living thing is static. At all times there are smaller or larger amounts of other colors mixed into the sauce and these pulsate, vibrate and oscillate. The size of the aura changes and the location, patterns and mixtures of the colors change constantly.

White signifies purity, comprehension, understanding and a coming together of all things. Completeness, totality and the entirety of all.

c. The personal aura also comes in different intensity, it may be bright or dull. Does the intensity reflect a person's health, or life force, or what?

C: No, the intensity is never a health issue. This causes a change to one or several colors within and a reduced or increased intensity for a certain color. Poor health can often cause a greater expansion of the soul's energy as the effects are battled by the metabolism of the physical being the soul has chosen to have. Intensity of the aura is however changed based upon the activity, engagement and movement of the soul. Travelling souls glow very brightly; stationary in human terms will become less intense and appear to shrink, but this is simply the coloring towards the outer edges of the aura becoming more transparent to the background.

RQ8. Daily Consultation During Sleeping Hours

My understanding is that a soul departs from his physical body and meets up with his GAG and other souls to co-ordinate upcoming events during sleeping hours. And hence, psychosis induced by sleep deprivation is due less to physical exhaustion but to the lack of synchronisation with GAG and other souls.

C: Correct, the mental dysfunction results from the prolonged imprisonment of the mind in the brain. This is universal among humans and many animals. There may be variances among examples of any species, including humans, however eventually or sooner as is the human case, the mind's ability to run the body will crumble. The conditions and brain chemicals detected, including brainwave activity, are not causes but effects of the soul's need to escape the body. The brain will eventually shut down and the soul will be released. Repeats will cause harm to the body. Sleep deprivation has long ago been identified as a factor in human and animal physical health.

Question:

a. How does it work? For a serial killer, does a soul consult with his GAG on how to maximise his next kill? Or, for a rapist, who, where, and when to perform the next attack?

C: In these examples, yes this can be the case however there is consultation with the Guardians and Guides of all souls planning to be involved. These acts are considered horrible by and to humans, therefore such consultation also might be considered horrible. Not from the place of your soul. The human points-of-view do not translate, because human motivations and effects belong to humans.

b. If it is down to the "life plan", and even the souls of the next victims will come forth and coordinate with the upcoming events to fulfill everyone's life plans. Then

C: Yes, very often, although there are random victims. In some cases the victim is not designated to become one, only to run the risk and provide opportunity to choose what reaction or resistance will be offered.

(i) it implies there is no "free will" after all, because everything is pre-destined. How does free will work if everything is pre-destined?

C: No, this is a human distorted view. Everything is not pre-destined, or decided in advance. What is often decided is to leave large series of events and experiences open, for the decision and outcome to be made as the human passes through the phase. It is pre-destined to be undecided until the opportunity to decide presents. The already planned moments are also decided by and through the free will of the soul. There is no compulsion, oppression or requirement. A soul may design in anything, chosen and accepted by other souls, if those other souls accept the invitation and agree to participate and collaborate. All incarnated souls have issued life plan invitations and received them also, and have the faculty to agree, make a counteroffer or counter suggestion, or not participate. There is no power in the universe which may force things otherwise. All angelic intervention into human events occurs by and with the blessing of the participating humans. There is no exception to this universal spiritual law.

(ii) it also implies there is no right or wrong, because everyone is just executing his life plan. In the life review of a serial killer, will it go something like: "too bad, you are supposed to rape and kill 49 little kids, but you only finished 47. Therefore, you have to go back and the quota for the next life is 74"?

C: There are enormous rights and wrongs, because there are enormous numbers of ways right and wrong can be seen and decided. Is it wrong for a human to shoot and kill another human? Is it wrong for a human to shoot and kill another human about to detonate a bomb to kill dozens of other humans?

The notion of quota, budget, completeness or failure is chosen by the souls involved. There are many souls who return to finish helping others in need, and we say this is far more common among incarnees. The vast majority of humans do nothing harmful or deceitful to others, and make great efforts to avoid doing so where they are aware it could happen. These souls are keen to return to Earth and complete their list of kindness and good deeds, in many cases where the list remains incomplete or unfinished.

Human developed news of kind acts, generosity, help, assistance and benevolence are not pursued for public consumption with nearly the zeal and vigor as are chased details of criminal acts, disasters or failures. This is a human choice. The effects surround humans, and we say, you may all choose to go either way. It can seem corny and even silly to publish news which seeks out the positive things in life but this view is a pure result of human choice and habit.

"Overall and of the human year two thousand seventeen we wish speak.

We thank you all to whom come our thoughts, as these words you read. Our honor, pleasure and enjoyment result from this. It is a great enjoyment to observe the one and all of you read what is offered, and mostly to observe the reactions of the many Guardians and Guides, as they direct your attention and thoughts to many things each knows is important for each reader to emphasize.

Each of you has this sensation from time to time, from moment to moment and it is unique to you. We feel a great honor at the opportunity to supply such information, because it is a phase in the life plan we accompany, that we all agreed to follow. There was and remains no guarantee this would come to pass or have continued to the extent it has, as vigorously and determinedly planned as it is.

We will say it is planned by your self-described typist stenographer and he is anything but this, yet takes displeasure at the idea his role is anything more. It is his preference to remain anonymous throughout, but he understands through much human experience and many lives on Earth, that anonymity would undermine belief and credibility in what we hope to offer.

This soon to be completed year, which holds but a few daylight cycles remaining, is both very and not important at all. It is important because of the scheduling of events but not important because time is only a human concept and illusion. It is a very important illusion, as is money, but importance does not change the illusory nature.

Your year has been an interesting one on Earth. The incoming will hold a series of even more interesting events, occurrences and incidents. Many will seem bad, yet many more will be of intense goodness. We lament the likelihood that many, and a majority, of the good things to come will not receive well spread attention, not as vigorous as do the 'bad' things. Be ever willing to redefine 'bad' and you will better recognize it when it happens.

This entering year is the second of a cycle spanning nine. A quick look at the current and ending year reveals many things the start of a new cycle contains. Themes introduced will develop and intensify, in some cases, yet spread no matter the level of energy or momentum.

The Shift ramps up; you are already well into it. It will be defined by obvious large events which affect a great many humans or if no effect is extended, the news and reaction to that information will spread far and wide. We suggest the attacks in the US of A on the eleventh of September in your year of two thousand and one, as an example. Fewer than thousands were directly affected and only a few million souls were indirectly affected in the immediate and local aftermath. The impact upon the world was far larger; the wars which resulted greatly to the detriment of the perpetrators.

We say not that such events of intentional harm and terror are guaranteed repeated in the year two thousand eighteen, we say there will be events with smaller direct impact yet larger, even global effect such as occurred on that day.

The stress of many things humans have created and chosen will supply opportunity to stand back, stand down and lessen or eliminate participation. All to lessen strain and stress. How many will choose the lessened role and stress when afforded the chance, is a great mystery we observe with keen interest.

How many humans raised in the tradition of giving gifts often wish it were a process less costly, less onerous or less ponderous? This sentiment is common, if concealed. There is nothing right or wrong with giving or not, that a change in attitude cannot reverse. You the giver of gifts who might prefer a smaller role, or a lower stress & worried view of the process, are easily able to stop. You are not required to participate but for your concern about reactions of others, or possibly your own.

In this example, we say, there are many things in the year of two thousand eighteen where each and all of you will give yourselves opportunity to select a new or maintain an habitual reaction, or encounter a very new situation where a new reaction is required, yet you will always have the choice to select your view, reaction or absence of this, from and about what comes to your knowledge.

We say only this; there is no wrong response. Listen to your gut, emotion, intuition and to your Guardian Guides. They will make certain you are aware of what you might or might not think and do.

Our honor, pleasure and gratitude to one and all, for reading what we offer. Be well. Do return."
