

More Buzzwords & More

10 February 2024

Q: Esteemed Committee, somewhere in the comments, a reader mentioned emotional unavailability, in relation to romantic arrangements. I've heard that more than once, in fact a lot more than once, but I don't get it.

C: This does not exist, no such thing is possible with a human who meets two requirements: is alive and can communicate. The complaint is most often issued by a female whose male counterpart does not express himself or respond to her desires for emotion-based behavior and communication, to the extent she would prefer. If a human has emotions, these are always available and detectable, if not what observers or interactors prefer.

RQ: Okay another reader asked about ascension to the Fifth Dimensional Earth. What is that?

C: This means increased awareness of the existence of dimensions or realms outside human physical senses. Earth already exists in all dimensions and always has; the rise of awareness involves the minds of the humans aboard Earth, solely. Earth is not rising, lifting, going up or travelling anywhere physical it has not already been or isn't already going to visit. In general, when ascension is mentioned, this means a rise in human awareness and understanding.

*RQ: Next word: starseed

C: More human separation for classification between levels of awareness, generally of spiritual matters compared to purely physical, those which trigger the five human senses.

*RQ: Wayshowers ?

C: We repeat our response to the previous word, with the added tone of light leadership.

*RQ: Earthkeepers

C: Humans.

*RQ: Great Solar flash

C: A large ejection event from your central star, one which briefly produces an increased emission of light. The brightness has never and will not be when it occurs again, a flash in the way the human English word is understood. This will be a gradual increase over ten or twenty seconds, peak intensity lasting for approximately twenty to forty seconds of Earth surface time, then decreasing over a similar interval as the increase to peak required. The brightness will be sufficient to be seen clearly from Earth's half facing the sun when the ejection occurs. The light will do nothing but draw human and animal attention; the solar wind and radiation will have significant effects, such as causing electricity generation and supply to be interrupted for several days in many cases and places.

*RQ: New earth

C: New human consciousness.

*RQ: New Golden Age

C: Same reply as the previous.

*RQ: Aquarian energies

C: Meaning flowing as in water, the reason for use of aqua in the term. More easily detected effects from realms and dimensions not widely felt among humans and dismissed by established science. We suggest thinking of reiki as a good example of an aquarian energy.

RQ: Solar light bodies and activations - see quote from an article:

"We are in the midst of huge changes in our DNA at all cellular levels as our new Solar Light bodies are getting higher and higher frequency activations from the solar sun and 12 Central suns."

C: No, human deoxyribonucleic acid structures, latticework are not being reconfigured, rearranged or restructured. Even if this were to happen, which it has most notably when humans were created and later adapted to the Earth surface environment, it is not at the level of the cell but far smaller or lower. The structure of a human or any living organism's cell follows the DNA code. The implication that a house is being dismantled completely, a new frame put up or in, with previous materials other than its load-bearing frame re-installed so that it appears to be nearly the same or even identical, is the suggestion of this concept.

This is not happening; humans need no DNA alterations; what human computer code writers would call a sub-routine in a program, are "written", if you will, into human DNA already. These sub-routines, features or processes are being activated by changes to vibrational frequency levels. Humans need no physical alterations, any more than a human requires physical DNA change to feel better when receiving good news, or to become sad when negative news arrives.

RQ: From the "truther" community:

- Nesara/Gesara
- Reval or Revaluation of currency
- Med beds

A: For Nesara or Gesara, no input or answer from The Committee is necessary; because I am a little bit of an economics wonk (maybe more than a little bit) I already know what it means: National or Global Economic Security And Recovery Act. National for Nesara, Global for Gesara.

These names refer to proposed economic changes achieved with new laws, rules, procedures and policies, all intended to improve the economic situation, condition or prospects of most humans, but obviously not for the wealthy among us.

These concepts have nearly zero chance of implementation, because they are little more than communism re-branded & re-wrapped to look like something else. They're also nobly naïve, because rules about money are restrictions on liberty. Money by itself is just a belief voucher; they are accepted because s/he who takes them believes someone else will in turn accept them now or later, for something else they want, and so flow the currents of goods and services.

We don't want just money, we want what money obtains. If suddenly everyone woke up one day and discovered a bucket full of cash at the foot of the bed, equivalent to £500,000 or 250,000 two-pound coins, (imagine the weight of that really big bucket) would that money suddenly put more food out on shelves at the shop? Deliver more petrol to the filling station? Place more clothing in shops, more seats on more passenger aeroplanes? Cause more Americans use British spelling more often?

No.

So, rules about who has how much money, when and in which ways, are a short-term illusion, which over even a brief interval would change nearly nothing. The amount of money in existence right now, in control of humans across Earth's surface, is at the highest amount ever in the history of money. (A good book on that topic by Scottish economist Niall Ferguson is worth the time for people so interested in & disposed to the subject)

Where is all this money? At the moment central banks everywhere are using high interest rates to scavenge what can be removed from circulation, in attempts to lower what's available thus slow down the rise of prices, which have quickly shown their shrinking taillights to income headlights for a few years now. So far, the threat to social lubrication, in other words sufficient money or liquidity needed to make the world go 'round, have been contained.

Gee whiz, you might ask....how'd this happen? Covid and various world leaders, all working for their HCP masters.

Revaluation of currency is just a rearrangement of deck chairs on a sailing ship. Currency is worth what buyers and sellers want the value to be. These terms are but communist theory re-floated as something positive; unrestricted floating rates of exchange between currencies, as part of global trade, are the quickest way to remove constraints to economic expansion. Human economic history is crystal clear on this.

C: Med beds or medical beds are devices intended to treat, heal or provide therapeutic benefit, when lying in the bed. The effectiveness of the device depends as much on its operation as the belief a user has. Doubt and skepticism play a large role in treatment of mental and physical ailments, as do positive attitudes, approaches and perspectives. S/he who wants to get better, will do so more easily and quickly, because of that. The med bed user who remains skeptical, believing that benefits are due entirely to the device and not their thoughts, are far less likely to receive a benefit.

Now some "more"; a reader says & asks:

RQ: The Committee said that though we spend time in Heaven in between lives, most souls spend little time there overall.

Where are they the rest of the time?

I confess that I was disheartened by this information because my human mind loves the idea of spending most of the time in a perfect Earth-looking environment.

C: No soul spends time in Heaven; time does not exist in Heaven. This view can only be possible when looking at human lives along the human time numbering sequence called a calendar.

Allow us a comment on your final sentence, then shall we continue to explain intervals in Heaven humans can perceive.

You can find then visit or create yourself, the most perfect environment possible, in Heaven. What is perfect for you is subjective; other souls would immediately recognize both the beauty of the place you deem perfect and your preference for it, however other such souls likely would share your enthusiasm. No matter, invite them to your perfection and they shall invite you to theirs. All shall enjoy. It is not merely the environment but the invitation, plus the company of other souls, which make enjoyment possible and good and possible for everyone.

Human lives are for your soul what a book can be for a human. How much time passes between looking at the title, opening to the first page for a glance, then closing the book after locating the final page. This might require a few seconds only, or at most just a minute.

This is incarnation; upon your return home from Heaven, your departure for a voyage across Earth in a body, arrival as a baby then your later passing or death, often as a larger bodied adult, is merely a book you can quickly examine for contents, length and theme. Your return can and often seems to other souls as if you were gone for just a bathroom break

How much effort is made to read the life book, to review the history of the incarnation, is immaterial to other humans aboard Earth, because time doesn't pass for a soul, only for a human. S/he whose body dies then returns to Heaven in spring of year 1950 but incarnates again in summer of the same calendar year, passes the same interval, lapse or size of visit in Heaven as does another soul who reincarnates after the human Earth life which ends in year 1950, year 1050 or year 2050.

Human time sequence makes this seem impossible; true from the human perspective, but not in Heaven.

Time cannot be spent in Heaven because it does not exist. Your soul is eternal, no sun rises or sets; no days, weeks, months or years exist unless you wish to have this effect. Many souls in Heaven try this out for fun and nostalgic memories. Your soul also tries out time cycles as they exist on other planets and create effects in the social structure and hierarchies of civilizations of the same planets.

Your existence in Heaven is your natural condition; Earth is the distortion you know it not to be, because you deliberately, specifically set aside Heaven to experience a human life. This decision is what causes such a question which brought about this response.

If in Heaven you fondly remember the rise and set of the sun, as do many a human enjoy them aboard Earth, you may in Heaven enjoy the most beautiful sunrise, sunset or twilight indefinitely. The Earth colors of red to orange to yellow or in the reverse order, and many gradual variations of each color as reflected off clouds, can be enjoyed in green to blue, purple to violet or any combination you like. Many a human incarnation veteran enjoys a green sky, in the same way a natural blue sky appears on Earth.

Allow us a concrete example; place a wristwatch on your arm in Heaven, which you can have if you like. Set the time according to what it might be on Earth; this can be done from the perspective of an orbiting synchronous satellite. The time will pass, or so suggest the hands and numbers on the dial, but Earth can be stopped for the entire lap around the watch face during which the watch hands or numerals might move & change.

This seems strange to a human, as it should; you are human. Earth daylight sequences are a necessary part of your existence; running on your legs and hands at the same time can seem impossible, but to a gorilla it is much more natural. To a dog or bear, it is the preferred, natural feeling way.

Human calendar considerations matter to humans, but not to your soul. Daylight and darkness upon the planet surface gravity requires a human to touch, are optional. Included with the option is a non-revocable feature; loss of perception of the true timeless nature of your soul's existence.

Your soul chooses incarnations with great care and seriousness, but during the same process, your soul, which is you, understands that life seems permanent, final and set when incarnated. It has to seem this way, for maximum benefit to be derived.

Human life is not existence, it is a voyage. Heaven is your destination and home, immediately recognized once you return home.

Be well one and all, do return soon.
