

The Chosen Ones

22 October 2024

A post earlier this year discussed spirituality buzzwords. The phrase on tap today is another. Neither “creating reality” nor “chosen ones” finds itself in short supply. Who gets chosen and who does the choosing?

This topic has been explored before but not exhaustively; more backpressure is now released.

Q: Do Chosen Ones exist?

C: Yes, selected by themselves.

Q: Why does this term gain traction, popularity and acceptance?

C: Human proclivity for hierarchies.

Q: If a person chooses to be unique or different in some way, how does that create a hierarchy?

C: It does not.

Q: So, what is the chosen one?

C: A person who neither describes her/himself this way nor thinks s/he is.

Q: Without a doubt, many people never think they've been specially chosen and never say it.

C: Two broad groups contain such folks; aware of a spirituality component to human life, and otherwise. The otherwise group, who might have heard of spirituality or not, but do not know much about it or care what it means, contains an almost complete absence of the notion chosen people have been so named, identified or found.

Among the smaller percentage of humans who do acknowledge, seek, embrace and espouse the spiritual aspects of mankind, the condition is applied by observers.

Nobody is more a chosen one than others.

All humans are chosen.

Q: Chosen by whom?

C: Themselves.

Q: Chosen or selected for what?

C: Human life.

Q: Why is the term so often brought up?

C: In a positive way, it is used to display esteem, admiration and respect. In a negative way, it is used to denounce, reduce and belittle disagreement.

Q: We humans come under steady pressure, influence and control to curb our enthusiasms, squash our differences and reduce ourselves to the end of compliance; to fit in according to the preferences of others around us who both dislike it and hold something over us, to make the restrictions stick. How does this become esteem, admiration & respect?

C: Resistance. Once you have held your ground long enough and also displayed kindness and affection for your fellow wo/man, these traits are noted. This is often difficult, withholding of love and acceptance are powerful tools, surviving their absence is not easy.

Q: How would any one of us know we are on the withholding, controlling side of the equation?

C: As parents or leaders in any situation, you will know this if you feel dislike or disdain for any person around you. If what is said annoys you, if what is done bothers you emotionally, you are a controller. True acceptance is allowance of others to do and be as they wish, naturally.

An example is a tree; some of these large and hard plants might have a shape, form and appearance you find pleasant. You like the leaves, needles, flowers or nuts it offers. Something or many things about it, are appealing. Does this mean you dislike other trees? Perhaps, but what do you do about the trees you like less, or openly dislike? Kill them? Or do you accept them, admire them for having grown and survived and move on from there?

Unlike a tree, a human can interact with another human in ways the other person will recognize. S/he might respond or react. Because all humans learn this early in life, some young people are taught and learn to take the opportunity to express disapproval through facial expression, words or behavior, with the objective of changing what they see.

Who appoints a controller of others? Who designates this apparent authority? The target.

S/he who is labeled a chosen one, learns to resist or ignore.

Q: Don't such ignorers or resisters pay a price for doing it?

C: Yes, in every case.

Q: Being rejected by one's family or friends can be a rocky road to travel.

C: Yes, but such loads and roads lead to deep satisfaction. Friends can be exchanged and replaced. Family also, on Earth. Not in Heaven.

Q: Why can't this be done in Heaven?

C: All humans are connected, but the links can be made invisible between and among many groups of humans. Absent human experience, this is impossible.

Q: Did the Nazis, the perpetrators of the holocaust, of World War II in Europe, really fail to recognize the ties which bind all humans?

C: Yes, this was the life plan chosen by leaders of all genocidal regimes in human societies.

Q: Could the victims of such atrocities have been complicit?

C: Nearly all were, part of the life plans assumed.

Q: Could it be properly stated that victims of genocidal forces were Chosen Ones?

C: Yes, in the highest, most altruistic way. The human view would be that such victims were chosen, but in practice, the victims chose this way to suffer then have their lives brutally ended.

Q: Are we going to see another example of this on Earth, in human societies?

C: No, this phase has ended.

Q: What about Ukraine and Palestinians in Gaza? Victims in Lebanon?

C: These are different examples. The Israeli aggression is a lashing out as a response to and now counterattack against evil forces that would exterminate Israelis, if allowed to continue. Ukraine is not a genocidal initiative, despite the many dead who have perished.

Q: Are the dead Palestinians, Hezbollah members and Ukrainian soldiers and citizens, part of the Chosen One category?

C: No. Neither are the dead Russian troops.

Q: Why has the phase of genocidal extermination ended?

C: Mankind can now be made aware of it across the globe and nearly immediately. Most humans reject this, nearly all humans.

Q: The Nazis knew their actions would be broadcast across the world but acted anyway.

C: The Nazis were also blinded by lust for power, assuming little resistance would be offered, insufficient to prevent them from achieving their objectives. Just as continues to occur today, with your hidden controlling powers.

Q: The HCPs are not conducting genocide.

C: Because they cannot without losing their own heads in the process. They know they risk having their own heads placed in the guillotines they would employ, if this were attempted.

Q: How would the few among us, who might be given the label of Chosen One, resist this?

C: As is done now, with information. Humans have always struggled with freedom of expression, both embracing and disliking it simultaneously, using communication technology, employing internet links which have exploded across Earth over the most recent three decades.

As the volume and reach of expression have gone to all corners of Earth and human societies, so has been revealed the human tendency to curtail, edit, modify, suppress and eliminate that with which one disagrees.

The increase in resistance to different ideas is strongest among purveyors of new, often unique ideas, who almost always fail to see this resistance in themselves. The idea that being open-minded is noble is mistakenly embraced by too many humans as a permission slip to replace an existing idea, notion or habit with a newer one. To push forward the new and eliminate the old.

An example is the toppling of a statue, one which represented a person whose methods and practices were once accepted but are now rejected. The better way forward is to inform and if possible, to educate about what came before and what is now. The symbol of the person should remain, to serve as an example of what was and has changed, and why. Attempting to eliminate the symbol, such as a statue, works against the goal purveyors of new ideas wish to promulgate.

Q: What role does the Chosen One play in this process?

C: Illumination.

Q: Enlightening what?

C: Recently a quote was offered here about a burning candle being used to light many more, without its own brightness being lessened or its duration curtailed. The Chosen Ones are the candles. Unlike burning paraffin, which produces light intensity limited by the chemistry of its composition and available oxygen, the brightness of the human candle increases as more are ignited and joined closer together. The collective brightness increases in scientifically measurable ways and is visible from ever greater distances, far beyond the light intensity the first and few burning candles can produce.

Q: Is the greater glow of mankind visible when compared to just a few decades ago? By Alien ET visitors and by our energetic soulmates in Heaven?

C: Both, but more importantly, by humans yourselves.

Q: In what ways are We The People taking more and better note of the greater brilliance of mankind?

C: We mentioned above the hidden controlling powers, assiduously and eagerly working to both remain hidden and unidentified yet seeking to ever expand power and control. The problem now encountered by this movement is disclosure and exposition.

The ability to assassinate a world leader of prominence has improved well beyond what was employed in your human year of 1963 to kill John Fitzgerald Kennedy, but simultaneously has the awareness of the human population nearly everywhere to why, how and who might carry out such act.

The more efficient the deed, the more skeptical, angry and even violent would become the populace such an assassination would be carried out to control.

The hidden controlling powers do not care about Donald Trump personally. This former and future USA president has been a well-known businessman and celebrity for many decades. He came under the scrutiny of the hidden powers only because he dared venture into their gardens and trim their hedges.

He was allowed to run for president because it was believed he would lose. His victory in year 2016 was a rude awakening for the powers who would reject such an adversary at the helm of the leading economic and military power of Planet Earth.

Once in office, he was attempted taken out by several legal and legislative moves which, had such initiatives been successful, would have been both gleefully or begrudgingly accepted by the subject populace and the world's societies in general.

Unable to do this, he was removed in an election coup d'etat and replaced by a pair of puppets, sure to be compliant and submissive to orders from above. Now that Trump has advanced to the brink of reassuming leadership of his nation, opposing forces have been restrained because of world enlightenment, awareness and knowledge.

The fast, quick and effective elimination of Trump would raise too many eyebrows and pitchforks; too many observers would disbelieve the narrative offered, fabricated from whole cloth. The social disturbances and chaos would undermine the objectives the hidden powers seek. These concealed forces among you, produced by you, much prefer a compliant, passive if complaining populace. This ensures even greater power and authority for them and makes it far easier to perpetuate their schemes. A relatively passive population, one not given to widespread violence, protest and resistance, far more easily swallows the stories, distractions and subterfuges offered with regularity.

The recent influx of tens of millions of illegal aliens into the USA has been engineered to increase the percentages of the compliant, submissive population, making it easier to maintain control and exert authority.

Open disregard for national law, and bitter condemnations launched against anyone who dares criticize such disregard, are an example of hidden power handiwork in action.

Counterbalancing this trend is the light of the Chosen One.

S/he has chosen her/himself, avoids the label, rejects it if offered or suggested and seeks but to spread ideas.

Acts follow thoughts; fear restricts expression of thought. The concealed powers prefer that telepathy remain largely inside their fictitious province of authority and continue to succeed in the repression of this idea. Because humans discount or simply deny communication with and among you can occur without speech or writing, the few instances of its occurrence relative to the general world population are successfully portrayed as the weird and strange exception.

Along with this has been planted the fiction that such things as hate crime or speech exist. The concept of thought punishment is too easy to detect and resist, so temporarily attaching it to a physical crime against a person has been successfully used to generate acceptance that unpopular speech is a jailing offense, or at least one deserving of a fine and severe warning. A stark current example of this is the United Kingdom. Many nations have carved out criminal punishments for unpopular speech and continue to enforce them. A once best-selling American author was recently detained, jailed and killed in prison in the Ukrainian Oblast for daring to say unpopular things about the Russian invasion and Ukrainian authorities.

The light of the Chosen One, not the chosen one her/himself, is the antidote.

Be well one and all and do return soon.
