

THE MEANING OF LIFE

25 July 2020

Q: Esteemed Committee, what does or can this mean?

C: You ask us what meaning means?

Q: Touché, mes amis. What I want to ask is, life must have meaning, right?

C: Or wrong, this is a human judgment. Life is permanent, thus has all and no meaning.

Q: No meaning?

C: Meaning is comparison. Permanence has no comparison, it can always change, adapt, modify and amend, thus meaning attached to anything requires perspective and position. These must stand upon platforms of experience and knowledge. Gain more experience and knowledge, which are the same thing, which change perspective's position. This alters comparisons and significance of meaning.

Q: Do our souls have lives?

C: We all live, short vowel sound. We do not have segments divided into lives, long vowel sound.

Q: Human life meanings are what then?

C: Experiences for and of the soul.

Q: It's common for us humans to think life had great meaning, or little meaning or some type of meaning.

C: All lives have complete, and simultaneously zero meaning. Your current human life is but a segment of your existence, a spoke of your wheel of existence. In practice, but a stay between the spokes, really. By itself, a life has no meaning, Compared to whatever you choose to place alongside it, meaning might begin to emerge.

Q: This is a great challenge, because we place great value in observer opinions, and derive meaning from them. Parental approval, spouse rejection, and so forth.

C: It is a great challenge because of human choices to assign values to them. Only.

Q: Does any soul return home from an incarnation, convinced s/he wasted time and effort pursuing the exercise?

C: It is not exercise, and no pursuit occurs, and no. No soul regrets incarnation.

Q: "You'll be sorry you were ever born!" is not a valid attack?

C: No, such regret is not possible. All births are voluntary.

Q: Is every human alive now in year 2020 Gregorian, pleased to be aboard Earth?

C: Yes, but some people have human-convinced themselves to see otherwise.

Q: Let's ask for reader questions on this topic, shall we?

C: Indeed and we await.
