

Life Budget Plans

23 February 2021

A reader asked about spiritual contracts, not the best name as The Committee explains. The questions are:

1. Are some set in stone and others revocable?
2. If revocable, how does one go about revoking it?
3. I assume that when planning incarnations, spiritual contracts are made to experience a variety of situations like being rich, poor, generous, miserly, have mental illness, not have mental illness, correct?
4. I have read that we incarnate to "remember who we are". What does that mean?

Rather than answer the questions the usual way, The Committee is going to speak to the questions and topic at length, without commercial break or interruption.

C: The agreement is a promise, a commitment and most of all, an adventure. The human idea of a contract, a list of obligations, tasks, functions and activities between entities who come together for mutual benefit, is not the ideal description of the human soul journey.

We much prefer to say, adventure. If you set out along an unknown path confident that it will lead to a wonderful destination, as a human you will have the same feeling as you receive when planning your human adventure.

No court, judge, arbiter, referee or review committee—a pun we most certainly intend—will ever sit in judgment of you or any being associated with your adventure. Only you will evaluate and decide for yourself if the effort achieved the result and effect you want.

The remembrance of who you are, is the opening of rooms in your house you have chosen to close for a brief time. The house of your existence is large, not all rooms are needed at all times, however they are all a part of you. Your house always grows, increases in size. To remember who you are on Earth, is to look inside some of the rooms of the house you have built.

Your agreements are always voluntary, always changed and always adjustable. The concepts of revocation, abridgement, vitiation, annulment and cancellation do not apply. The seemingly set-in-stone aspects of any human life plan are set by the human, who chooses the stone, cuts it to the preferred shape, places it for angle, pitch and orientation then steps upon, around and over them when the juncture the stones create is encountered.

Life agreements end when human life does.

Each of you may include in your life plan anything which can be achieved inside the physical limits of Earth life, and often things which fall outside the physical limits of the vibration range the human form occupies. This means you will at times or even continuously be able to hear and see things few humans can.

Within the stepping stone way-markers each of you place, great free range is allowed. If your choices direct you wide of the mark you planned to hit, you can adjust. For this reason you sleep, among other reasons also, and you confer and adjust with the help, assistance and oversight of your guardians and guides and also of all people and beings who will be part of the encounter.

Humans commit very strongly to the life plan, thus the perception of it as a contract. You are both judge and party to it, as a lawyer among you would say, but no enforcement exists beyond your own. Because humans repeatedly demonstrate that humans are the most severe assessors, evaluators and critics of oneself than any one soul could ever be over another—you judge yourselves quite harshly, often without justification—the perception of contract enforcement is solid.

The solidity of your existence is your soul, not your body and not your life course. No plan, agreement, contract or path through the forest can come close in importance.

Human life budgets set out limits, just as spending is controlled if obeyed after established. Look around at the millions of things you could do with a human life, but for time and ability to travel to the locations.

So you all choose, select and design moments into a life budget, in order to limit what you might do thus focus upon the things you design, in order to create the experience. The limitations faced as a human make these things real, thus the emotions felt are equally real.

Often is it said human reality is an illusion. No, it is not. It is as real as anything in the universe. Human reality is a limitation, but it is quite and absolutely real. The limits create experience, and the inability to escape certain circumstances, or a limited ability to control them, are what supply knowledge, belief and the understanding impossible to obtain otherwise.

How many of you have felt the terrible, dreaded sensation of something gone wrong, and said to yourself "...if only I had done...." ? Done what? Seen the future and avoided the negative?

This experience provides for you what cannot be had in Heaven. Ask yourself why so little about the future can be seen or known, and the answer is this: you would likely attempt to avoid the very way-marker stones you have placed with great care, skill and desire. Avoidance of life will get you copious amounts of avoidance, which can be more easily had by avoiding incarnation, which most souls choose. You however who are reading these words as a human, have chosen a human life and the limitations both generally applicable and also specific to you.

True knowledge of the future means you have given up your free will and have become a slave to the positive. We know of no human who consistently chooses pursuit of the negative when offered a choice of that or things positive. If you as a human can always know what will be positive as you deem it preferable, pleasurable and good and then chase it, your life would become a living hell in very short order and soon it would end, and badly.

Have any of you observed the pursuit of mind altering medications, drugs and other substances, which offer precisely this option? How does human life proceed for a person who does this? It becomes shredded, is left in tatters and ends badly, sometimes painfully and violently.

To know everything which awaits, especially the way stones which mark your great moments, your marriages, your children, your achievements, failures, successes and projects means you will not encounter the junction, crossroads, people and events which make these invaluable to all souls every and anywhere in the universe.

In your huge house, in your complete self, you have access to the blueprint you drew long before you were born, which was as recent as yesterday also. It was just then, it was long ago and is right now, also. This magical plan can be changed, re-drawn, modified and adjusted any way you wish. Your guides are as far as your fingertips when needed to help make the adjustments, which is the primary purpose of life they have, as your guides.

This is the power of prayer, active requests for assistance and help of which you are conscious and aware. The many of you are equally aware of the help which comes, unaware as you might be of receipt of your request by the intended parties.

Our hope with all the channelings and writings we have offered through this human who now types our thoughts, is this: believe who you are, believe in our existence and be assured that all requests and all communications are heard. Not all are fulfilled immediately, or slowly and sometimes not at all. Your life agreement provides otherwise, in some cases. The inability to get by asking can often be a strong part of the life budget you established. The sensations of poverty, want, shortage and lack are the most valuable jewels of the soul, so rich and worthy are they to have, that so few of you in Heaven possess them.

Revered and admired is the soul who has traversed this experience, a feeling we know sounds almost cruel to a human who has suffered or even observes it. This cruelty is but the other side of the coin of gain, growth and beauty. Everything with a top has a bottom, everything tall and mighty has a foundation.

The more empty a life might feel while in it, the more full and rewarding it truly is. This is the plan, budget, agreement and contract you make with yourself.

Be well one and all, and do return. Our blessings we send and we thank you all, for your blessings returned to us, given as you read our words.
