

Outside Looking In

Humans successfully see Earth, each other, animals and plants. What do our souls see before incarnation, especially the first time?

Q: Esteemed Committee, my first question is the second sentence of the topic's introduction; what is seen by a soul before the first jump?

C: Opportunity.

Q: How many souls can incarnate, anywhere in the galaxy inside the dimensionality we humans have?

C: All souls can do this.

Q: The percentage on Earth would be how much?

C: The approximate figure would be 0.00000000000000001567 %

Q: How many souls can incarnate here, but won't? Who have the ability to incarnate as a human but reject, decline or ignore it?

C: Even less than the reciprocal of the fraction above, expressed here as a decimal. Most ignore; this means greater than 99% of souls in existence ignore incarnation of any type, as a physical being on the surface of any planet. Of the less than one percent, more than 9 of 10 of them decline the invitation. Most of the remainder reject it; what remain are an extremely small number take the plunge, make the trip or climb the hill. Some of these souls, such as the readers of this website, have come to Earth.

Q: We humans are a tiny, minuscule minority of souls in existence?

C: Yes.

Q: Among the souls who examine Earth and give a visit consideration —whether incarnating or not— what do we & they see?

C: Cost versus benefit; is the price good for the product it brings? Is the juice worth the squeeze?

Q: What makes it worth the effort for all of us who came here, given that we are the extreme fringe?

C: No soul is the fringe, this is essential to include in what we shall describe briefly. To suggest or say any human behavior, attitude or approach is at the outer edge, along the perimeter or near the border of the spectrum of behavior, is not correct.

The human habit of aligning data along a scale or plotting a curve on a graph to represent the data, is two dimensional. Humans are three dimensional physically, inside the human perception, but humans are five dimensional in actuality, the two invisible dimensions not considered by most among you, because of the adjective we used to describe the two.

The better way, which is also limited and not comprehensively accurate, is to project data into a sphere. How much or little to the left, right, forward, back, up or down within the sphere, begins to show the pattern, if one can be perceived. As can be appreciated, things inside the sphere cannot be fringe; even a small minority of data points separate from the majority, are included within the sphere, thus part of it.

What makes incarnation worth the effort, is the experience obtained. What humans get, cannot be had another way.

Allow us now to explain what the topic asks, what souls see when looking at Earth incarnation; we replied “opportunity”. To expand, we say that opportunity is the best of the unknown, what makes it so appealing.

As a soul, you know that you can return to your permanence at your will. The many a human will lament the circumstance of the moment, or of the position or of the physical place in which they find themselves.

When a soul incarnates, the soul knows s/he will no longer see this; s/he will adopt the notions of gender, of food and of physical touch. These develop steadily and slowly as a newborn and as an infant, such that no human believes the physical bodies are unusual, temporary or out of place.

This is the technical, clinical or medical view. The emotional experience is the objective; no clinical forecast, evaluation or assessment can be given for this; the opportunity to plow through something of one’s personal, unique creation is the attraction.

Q: Allow me to cut in for a moment; a question occurred to me when y’all mentioned notions of gender. As understands almost anyone not imprisoned inside a cave for the most recent thirty years, the concepts of gender change, fluidity and more than two, have become well known and much discussed; does the absence of gender for our souls cause this to happen among humans?

C: Yes. The challenge is acceptance of soul’s existence, which would follow awareness of it. As has been said many a time and we have repeated, humans do not have a soul; humans are a soul.

This is a challenge for most humans, including humans aware of the stress, discomfort, unease or dislike of the gender each one has chosen. If more homo sapiens were aware of and accepting of the soul’s existence, their personal life contract, agreement and deliberate choice to be male or female, much of the stress, controversy and concern surrounding what humans have called gender dysphoria, would disappear.

There is no such thing as gender dysphoria for a human who understands her or his choice.

Q: Thank you, please continue with your discussion before my break.

C: The human shall be born and will grow to the point of being able to walk, listen then speak, in the great majority of cases. Almost no human has memories of this stage; few of you remember when crawling began, then walking upright. Nobody who can listen to language and speak remembers the process of learning it, yet all of the people who can use spoken language can easily observe and understand a toddler doing it.

From this point forward, for most humans, the bulk of the life plan unfolds. Humans will toss a large number of stones, throw many sticks large and small and pass through many other sticks and stones offered up by fellow humans. It is unknown how one shall react and feel, even if the events and occurrences can be controlled to the second.

This is why you have incarnated; to have the opportunity to feel and react.

Q: Let’s assume we’re astro/cosmonauts, orbiting Earth looking down with our powerful telescopes; we detect the now more than 8 billion humans; what do we think of this, when we have made our decision to incarnate for the first time?

C: An eagerness humans cannot know; thus attempts to describe it shall we not make.

Q: How many humans alive on Earth now are first timers? Here for the human voyage for their first trip?

C: About half.

Q: Does this have an effect on human life?

C: Yes, it makes things better. Humans have created information overload but not reduced the human decision, thus preference, to complain. Thus, complaints outweigh nearly everything, humans bombard one another with them. The easy but sadly incorrect conclusion is that humans are inherently bad, that Earth should be perfect in the estimation of anyone who has fallen prey to the infection of complaints.

Q: What's the solution, answer or antidote to this?

C: Consider your blessings, advantages and benefits; then have gratitude and appreciation for them.

Q: Wouldn't the complaint disease be a deterrent to incarnation?

C: To the contrary, it is a magnet. The chance to play victim, bitterly complain about nothing important as if that thing were the basis of all existence, is a golden chance like almost no other in any of the nine universes. Even better is to observe it without ability to influence it.

Q: If it's so great on Earth, why are so few souls incarnated?

C: Other options, choices and alternatives you do not and cannot know as a human.

Q: Thank you, Esteemed Committee.

C: Welcome are you all.
