

Progress Report - The Shift

10 October 2021

Thanks to the eagle eye of readers here, we know about the most recent post on The New Golden Era. Essentially, right around the corner comes the first "oil shock" or major event to curtail supplies of crude oil. The best solution or outcome will be cooperation, where the "haves" allow the "have nots" a proportional share.

Bear in mind, only about half of crude oil produces fuel, the rest used for petrochemicals, mostly plastics. (Petroleum = oil from rocks i.e. mineral oil and petrochemicals derived from them. Naphtha, which is lighter fluid, is distilled then chemically broken down into ethylene (related to ethanol) to make polyethylene and many plastics.

Most fuel is used for transportation; cars, aircraft, ships and trains. In some countries, electricity generation. Some nations can supply their own consumption, some mostly export, others do both: Russia, USA, Canada, Venezuela, United Kingdom, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Iraq and Iran are a few examples. Many countries must import most or all of their crude oil derived fuels and chemicals, or the just the finished materials or final products. Most crude oil moves by pipeline or bulk ocean-going carrier ships ("tankers").

The forecast offered on The New Golden Era suggests significant worldwide shortages; this means ocean transport, likely a blockage of either the Strait of Hormuz or the Suez Canal. The percentage of crude oil & products passing through either & both, are significant.

Neither The New Golden Era's host's guides nor mine, are providing details other than to say "watch the full moons." The Committee goes on from here, and I am paraphrasing for brevity, even though I have used quotation marks.

"Few of the HCPs believe this, among the very few who even know it is coming; most do not. Almost no human knows. You do, giving you enormous personal ability to select your reaction.

The reflexive stance of seeking a way to preserve as best as possible, one's position and place in the greater scheme of current life, is futile. Most people will pursue ineffective ideas or courses of action. Doing so will produce an initial feeling of control, through resistance and dominance efforts, but soon these re/actions will lead to even greater frustration, dissatisfaction and for many people, despair.

You who read these words now, have been led here by your own choice, even if you are unaware of the memory of the decision, which includes many of you, a majority. This is not important; what matters is that you know what is happening and why. This allows you to choose acceptance more easily. You will observe the circumstances which affect you personally, with knowledge about why they are happening. This will allow you to remove from consideration actions and reactions which will not lead you to a place of mental stability. Observing what many others around you are doing, with a view to imitating their actions which produce a short term, fleeting, fading then disappearing success will lead to frustration, dissatisfaction and anger.

If you are not already aware of or well-studied in the petroleum trade of your nation or region, you might well do this over the next month or two. Knowledge is calmness and peace, not power. Is crude oil extracted or imported; does refining take place? What non-fuel uses for the derivatives or distillates, exist in your nation or region? Is electricity dependent on crude oil? Not natural gas unless it is imported in liquid form and re-converted back into a gas. This knowledge will allow understanding of the soon to arrive effects, large or small, upon your nation or region.

Much talk and discussion occurs regarding economic changes, economic re-sets and impending collapse of the middle class which could follow. Restrictions and limitations imposed because of pandemic fear, dominate discussion.

Surprised will be the some of you, when you see how quickly the concerns of the pandemic fade into the background, pushed off the front page by something humans cannot blame upon another human.

As has been predicted, the supply and prices of crude oil and derived products will recover, but this will not be a permanent or even long-lasting condition. Lessons learned from this upcoming first event will greatly assist some people among mankind, who will learn to separate control of personal reaction from control of surrounding conditions. The strongly held belief that collective efforts can change anything, will also be scrutinized, and modified; more emphasized will become the concept of controlling one's reaction, not placing responsibility for personal choice outside the person choosing.

Other people will not learn lessons, so repeat events will provoke similar reactions, or even less pleasant responses will be selected.

You who read these words know what very few humans understand. It is too late for attempts to spread the word beyond the reach already achieved, which have been made in other directions of which most humans are either unaware or deny can exist, if it is even attempted explained. The lateness is not human; this applies to us. We the collective of Guardian Angel Guides and other energetic beings around Earth, can no more make effective efforts to spread knowledge and understanding. You have been led to these as you decided, given the choice to believe or dismiss, and if you wanted to, to inform others. Uncertainty feeding skepticism is not your burden to overcome in other people.

You have knowledge which allows you to understand what will happen and to accept the effects humans neither create nor control. May your example benefit your friends and family who surround you.

Be well one and all, do return soon."
